

LOVE ALL SERVE ALL

Love 3 Sevalaya's News Letter - February 2009 Serve 11 Price-Re.1

Dear Friends,

January 30th was a busy day for us at Sevalaya. We assembled very early in the morning, around 6:30 AM at Mahatma Gandhi statue, on the Marina beach. Our children sang Gandhian Bhajans in the presence of the Governor of Tamil Nadu, ministers of the state and other officials. After this ten of our students joined a cycle rally and visited many educational institutions in the city and enacted a skit to emphasize the message of 'co-existence or no existence.' Some of us went to the Chennai central prison at Puzhal and Mr.G.Ram Mohan, gave a slide show presentation on the life of Mahatma Gandhi for the benefit of the prison inmates. Mr. R.Nataraj, IPS, Director General of Police (Prisons), inaugurated a 30 week program on Bharathi, Gandhi and Vivekananda for prison inmates, coordinated by Sevalaya. Then in the evening we had an inter-religious prayer in the city.

All this was done to observe the "Sarvodaya day", the death anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi. Sixty-one years ago, on the same day, he was shot dead. Like the "life" of Mahatma Gandhi teaching us lot of lessons, the "death" of Mahatma Gandhi also teach us important lessons.

Once there was a saint doing penance in the banks of a river. He noticed that a scorpion was caught in the river water. He got up and put his hand in the flowing water and picked up the scorpion, to save it. But the scorpion stung the hands of the saint. As it was very painful, the saint shook his hands and in the process the scorpion again fell into the river. The saint ran along with the water and caught the scorpion again and lifted it up. But the scorpion again stung his hand, and this process was going on for a couple of times. A man who was watching this came up to the saint and asked him "Are you mad? The scorpion keeps stinging you and you keep lifting it again." The saint replied "Stinging is the nature of scorpion. Helping others is my nature. Both of us will not change our ways".

Two thousand years ago, Jesus Christ came into this world to teach us love and compassion. We know what he got in return for this from the world. He was crucified on the cross, along with criminals. Did the "saint" change his nature? Mahatma Gandhi lived in this very world, "generations to come will find it difficult to believe", but he again practiced and preached Ahimsa and Truth. What did he get in return? He was shot point blank.

In addition to singing bhajans and lecturing about Gandhiji on the "Sarvodaya" Day, let us get the lesson from his death very clearly. The world is made up of many scorpions and few saints. The saints should not change their "nature".

Thanks & Regards

All play and no work...

Work-life balance is a term much discussed nowadays. Many employees particularly in the corporate sector work much longer than the scheduled hours, to the extent that one of the corporate leaders had to advise that it was not necessary to do so, and working within stipulated hours would be adequate to deliver the goods on time, efficiently and effectively.

Leave alone sitting late hours, many youngsters nowadays find their jobs so strenuous and stressful that during weekends they find the need to de-stress and unwind themselves. Were we not even in our Primary classes taught that all work and no play made Jack a dull boy? But the pity is that many of these people resort to habits which are detrimental to their health and lasting happiness. On the other hand, we also find several of them, for a change from their routine work, visit places like Sevalaya and spend their time usefully and selflessly for the benefit of the less fortunate.

The point is how to make our work itself a source of joy? Swami Vivekananda says how. Doing work with cleverness is a science. Attachment to results and selfish interests shatter our nerves, disturb our minds and accomplish very little work. "Work like a master; not like a slave", he commands! By doing the duty on our hand well, with single minded devotion, we make ourselves stronger, and rise to a position to attain more honored duties in society. Working selflessly, with single minded devotion and love brings happiness in work, he concludes.

You must have heard this story. Yet it is worth repeating in this context.

A saint met three persons who were working in a temple construction site. The terrain was rough and the weather was harsh. All of them were sweating it out. He asked them what they were doing. The first worker said, "I am laying the bricks." The second worker said, "I'm earning my livelihood." the third one replied, "I am building a magnificent temple". No need to say that the third worker with a broader perspective, envisioning the end result of his toil, enjoyed his work.

What about Gandhiji? Let us hear Eknath Easwaran, a U.S. based philosopher, who has written a book, "Gandhi, the Man".

"Once when I went to Gandhiji's Ashram, as I walked about in the neighbourhood of his little cottage, I saw the unending stream of political leaders from Britain to India who came to him throughout the day. I was wondering how he was able to bear the pressure of these significant interviews which would change the relations of two great countries, and in the evening, I expected to see a tired, irascible, very impatient man coming out. In stead I saw a smiling figure that looked as if he had been playing bingo with children all the day. I could not believe my eyes, because I was used to the idea that if we work 8 hours, we should be tense and ready to be irritated by anybody who tries to be nice to us. But he was completely untouched by his action."

"Mr. Gandhi, you have been working for 15 hours a day for 50 years for those helpless millions of India. Why don't you take a long holiday?" some westerner put this question to Gandhiji. Gandhiji smilingly replied, "I am always on a holiday!"

Do we have anything, even a very little, to learn from Gandhiji?
