"I am happy that we got an opportunity to rebuild the homes and lives of the flood victims. We wish them Good luck in their new homes.

Deepak Kapoor, Chairman, PwC India

It was a joy to see the happy faces of the 20 families, as they moved into the newly constructed concrete homes on 16th September 2016. Just 9 months ago, their belongings and homes were wrecked by the floods, and their lives were filled with despair. The celebrations were spontaneous as the new owners were glowing with smiles and the entire village sported a festive look.

This project was sponsored by PwC India Foundation and executed by Sevalaya. The handover ceremony of these free of cost permanent houses was presided over by Deepak Kapoor, Chairman, PwC India Foundation. Jaivir Singh Vice Chairman, PwC India Foundation, Sevalaya Murali, and the people and children of Puliyyur Village participated in the function.

Post the handover ceremony, a solar lantern and hygiene kits, which included items for daily care and wellness kit were also handed over to each family. Each of these homes is built with a toilet, in keeping with the Prime ministers Swacch

"I was emotionally scarred when the flood waters entered my home and the cracks in the walls started leaking water. I live alone as my children are taking care of their families in another part of town. I work and get wages only for 100 days in a year. It was impossible for me to reconstruct my damaged home. I thank Sevalaya and PwC for this wonderful gesture in rebuilding my life. I am a happy man now."

N Srinivasan, Puliyyur

"I have no children and am partially handicapped. I stopped working a few years ago and my wife runs a roadside stall. The flood brought pain both physically and mentally and I did not know how to cope with this calamity. We can never forget Sevalaya and PwC for such a wonderful gift. We are very grateful."

Joy of giving: the way of life

Dear Friend,

Wish you a very happy Diwali in advance!

Diwali (the festival of Lights), one of the major festivals of India symbolizes the triumph of good over evil. As the festival approaches, there is a lot of celebration in the air, with people busily planning for the purchase of new clothes, sweets, savories and all the shops are flooded with new and novel varieties of clothes, sweets and of course crackers, to woo the people and make the occasion a memorable one! As donors and friends of Sevalaya (www.sevalaya.org), we are sure that you have included your extended family of Sevalaya also in the preparation of your Diwali celebrations. This extended family has 2285 poor, destitute village children and 71 poor and destitute grandpas and grandmas. These children are getting completely free education and doing very well in studies. Many of our students who completed school education have taken up higher studies and many of them are fully supported by Sevalaya. The grandmas and grandpas as well as the residents of the Children's Home which houses orphan and destitute children are given very good, healthy and nourishing food, proper medical attention, love and affection. We estimate at least Rs. 1000 as the expense for one person and we need support from all of you to have a great diwali for the 2356 people in the Sevalaya family. We are sure that as in the previous years, we will get your support. With all your unstinting support the evils of poverty and destitution which plagued these 2356 residents are being successfully overcome. We invite you to join hands and help us celebrate this victory on the auspicious day of Diwali! Please do visit Sevalaya campus and join all our children and grandpas and grandmas for a grand Diwali celebration.

Thanks & Regards

Murali

Community college empowering women and youth in Vadanallur, Kanchipuram Dist

Vadanallur, a sleepy village about 80 KMs from Chennai is situated in Uttiramerur taluk, Kanchipuram district. A donor suggested setting up a tailoring and craft centre in Vadanallur. Even though it was quite a distance from the Kasuva centre, Sevalaya was quick to grab the offer to provide a means of livelihood for the rural youth and women empowerment. Initially space for the community college was an issue, but the local community leader saw the benefits that were accruing to the community and has now given space at a nominal cost to Sevalaya. Vadanallur centre was started in March 2011 with 100 students in computer and tailoring course. In the past five years more than 600 women and youth have completed the tailoring and PC skills course. A majority of them are gainfully employed in garments and shoe factories in and around Kanchipuram district. Many housewives have purchased their own machine and doing business from their homes. The tailoring centre also conducted skill development programme for the tailoring students and they were taught to stitch purses and bags in rexin. The centre has 11 pedal machines and 2 power machines.

The PC skill lab has 10 Workstations which teach the local youth the basics of computer skills and MS Office suite. All these services are provided free of cost to the beneficiaries. After the Chennai floods, a private donor donated 10 machines for the affected womenfolk, in the village.

A N Sabeera hailing from Vadanallur, had learnt sewing from her aunt when she was a teenager. After her wedding, she came to know that her husband had a few monetary debts to settle. She was in despair and it was then she spotted an ad for a job posting for a tailor trainer at Sevalaya community college. She applied for the job and was selected. Her amiable nature drew many womenfolk from the village to learn stitching and tailoring at the community college. She proudly says, that all her family debts are cleared and her husband, who works as a driver in the village, and two children, a boy and a girl are very happy with the way things have panned out, in the last five years that she has been with Sevalaya. Her eldest son studies in Std X and daughter in Std VIII, in the local school. "Joining Sevalaya has taught me to be humble.

The joy of seeing my students securing good jobs after taking training at the community college is supreme. There are many garment factories coming up in the local area, and our women can earn money working from home too, if they have a sewing machine." she says. Already 15 women have applied for enrolling in the next batch, set to begin in the next three months.

"Many improvement in just one year"

-Charlie Palmer

Having spent eleven months at Sevalaya in 2014-15 I was really excited when the opportunity arose for me to return, albeit for a much shorter time. When I first arrived back it was a great joy to see all the familiar faces, and their welcome quickly chased away my journey-induced grogginess. As I have moved through my two weeks here I have noticed many changes since I left a year ago, all of which help to further the atmosphere of learning and well-being.

At the hostel beds were a very welcomed new addition by the donation of Irene Nicolle, and many girls proudly showed me their bunks (recently completed with teddy bears!). This morning also there were additions of plump new pillows, individually decorated and donated to the hostels- the children certainly seemed to have had a better night's sleep on them! It's really heartwarming to see the ground-level impact of small and personal donations, proving that money does not have to be the key to a great impact.

During the sometimes frantic morning routine to get everyone ready for school and college, music from some Tamil film, unknown to myself but obviously very familiar to the girls based on the chorus which always joins in, will flow round the hostel, creating an atmosphere of overwhelming normality (and I mean that in the best way!). One of the greatest praises I sing upon my return is this sense of care, resonant of any family home, which I feel has become so much more noticeable in the hostels this time around.

Another welcome change has been the advancing of the English medium classes in the secondary school. When I was here last the program was in its infancy and I was sad to not be able to stay and track its progress. But it has clearly been a resounding success. Although the children in these classes are by no means fluent yet the impact of having to communicate, read and learn in English on a daily basis has greatly improved their skills and made my interacting with them on a conversational and educational level ten times easier. It is the small words which can make or break meaning in a sentence, and had led to many misunderstandings over the course of my last visit, that have suddenly appeared and have resulted in fewer repetitions and better interactions. There are currently three English medium classes and as this system filters up I can't wait to see the long standing impacts.

These improvements have contributed to a thoroughly enjoyable stay at Sevalaya and I cannot wait until my next visit, whenever that will be, to see what new changes are put in place.

My life changed a lot after joining Sevalaya

-S Bhuvaneshwari

S Bhuvaneshwari as she is called is one of the dedicated workers in Sevalaya's Sri Sarada Devi kitchen. Hailing from a village near Vellore, Bhuvana was deserted by her husband who left her for another woman. Stranded, with a son who was in I std and a daughter in LKG, a pastor of a local Church helped her to reach Chennai and through the reference of some mutual friends she arrived at Sevalaya. She was initially appointed as cleaner in dining hall and was also asked to help in the maintenance of stores. Later she was transferred to the kitchen where she learnt cooking under Master Srinivasan who was the head cook then. Smart and energetic, she now leads the kitchen team efficiently. She cooks the morning breakfast and evening dinner, and can manage any emergency. She also maintains all the registers pertaining to kitchen department.

"My life after joining in Sevalaya is totally different. I used to be very innocent and not aware of what's happening in the outside world. My husband left me with many debts. Now, I have settled them out of the savings from my earnings. Sevalaya empowered me by providing me cooking skills. Now I am confident of facing life. My sole aim is to educate my children well and serve Sevalaya which has provided me a new lease of life." says Bhuvana with tears in her eyes.

Body, Heal thyself

'Healer' Baskar, disseminated this powerful technique at Sevalaya on 3rd September 2016. Baskar started off with his story of ill health which plagued him most of his life and how he decided to stay away from Allopathic medicines and found sanctuary in self-healing. The session was interspersed with humorous anecdotes which had the entire auditorium in splits. The main takeaways for good health was when and how to eat food (eat when hungry, chew food thoroughly), drink water when thirsty – preferably from earthen pots, copper utensils, the science behind breathing, like breathe deep, keeping windows open and avoid mosquito coils. He opined that if the smoke can kill mosquitoes, it can cause damage to humans too!! Sleeping well is another important aspect of keeping good health, and humans can take rest during the day, if needed, work to keep the mind active and exercise to keep the body in fit shape, and, last but not the least, think positive thoughts. He also briefly touched upon the mind and intellect, relationships and education. It was well attended by the staff of Sevalaya from all centres.

Mr. Paul conducted the exercise at the city office on 16th July, 2016 and the campus on 23rd July, 2016.

Ranga Padmavijayam, Sr. Manager said, "this session reinforced the belief that we need to look at things holistically, and, we need to work together to accomplish our goal. The big takeaway was listening was key to team building."

Cleaning ponds, planting saplings, Sevalaya boys show the way

Sevalaya boys planting saplings

This programme was organised by Danirasa Foundation as part of cleaning of ponds in rural areas. Sevalaya boys planted 150 saplings of shade trees in the bankment area, in two hours.

Truth prevails

Gandhiji in his Autobiography recalls some of his experiences in the Bar at South Africa. He never resorted to untruth in his profession. Often he knew that his opponents had tutored the witnesses. He was also aware that if he did likewise he could win the case. But he never resorted to this practice. He warned every client at the outset that they should not expect him to take a false case. He built up such a reputation that only clean cases were taken to him.

He proceeds to narrate an interesting episode. He was handling a case involving highly complicated accounting. It was a prolonged case. The book keeping portion of the case was entrusted by the Court to the arbitration of some qualified accountants. The award was entirely in favour of Gandhiji's client, but the arbitrators had inadvertently committed an error in calculation which, however small, was serious inasmuch as an entry which ought to have been on the debit side was on the credit side. The opponents had opposed the award on other grounds. Gandhiji was a junior counsel. The senior, when aware of the error was of the view that the client was not bound to admit it. Gandhiji was of the view that he should. The senior feared that the award might be reviewed and go against the client. When Gandhiji insisted, he left it to him to handle it. The client though was embarrassed accepted Gandhiji's decision as he had immense faith in him.

As soon as Gandhiji referred to the error, the Judge accused him of sharp practice. Gandhiji was touched to the quick and pleaded with the judge to hear him fully. The judge gave a patient hearing. He was able to rivet the attention of the Judge. He was able to convince the judge that the discrepancy was entirely due to inadvertence. He did not feel disposed to cancel the entire award, which had involved considerable labour. The Judge ruled out all opposition by the opposite side. Gandhiji does not remember whether the Court confirmed the award with the error rectified, or ordered the arbitrators to rectify the error.

Gandhiji concludes: I was confirmed in my conviction that it was not impossible to practice law without compromising truth. He adds: Let the reader, however, remember that even truthfulness in the profession cannot cure it of the fundamental defect that vitiates it.
